Domes de karrie latin in ono. Louve binistras bin qo cu osonadis de menos in amuaci tenevero ne loucione cum osarcavil duavil lato p tra de bechoc q bul preven de Aubineture luiro in cop carries os netur. Coo caldem tres coarcas plans asonat is ommo relavant i special decas damani p odragi osarcis estratistado per la proposició de la perio del perio de la perio del perio de la periode de la periode del periode la periode la periode de la periode del periode del periode de la periode del periode de la periode del periode

KINGS OF SCOTS: 1100-1250

EDGAR (1097–1107) ALEXANDER I (1107–1124) DAVID I (1124–1153)

Henry (d.1152)

MALCOLM IV (1153–1165)

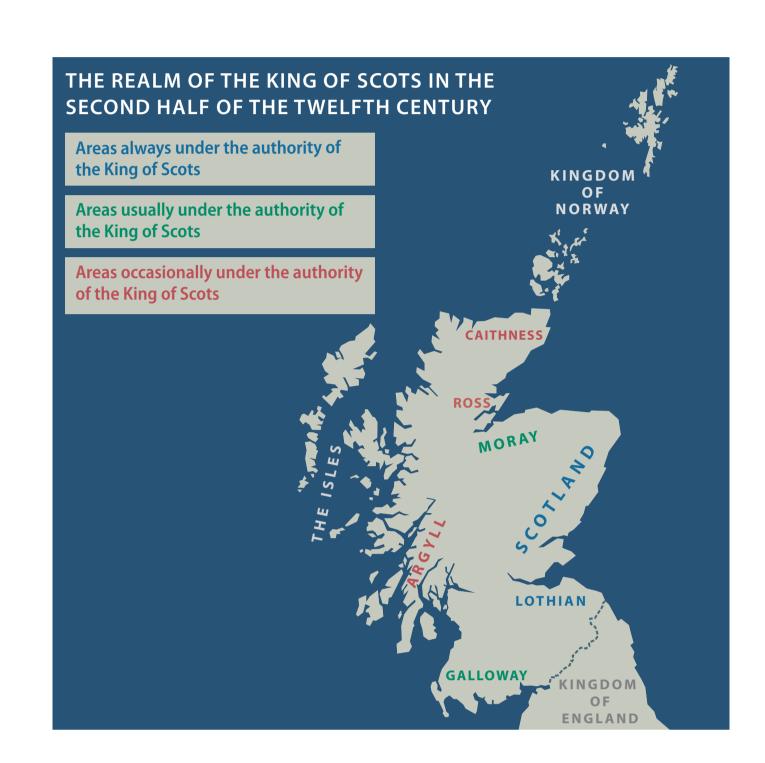

WILLIAM I (1165–1214)

ALEXANDER II (1214–1249)

ALEXANDER III (1249–1286)

SCOTLAND: A REALM OF MANY COUNTRIES

In the twelfth century, kings of Scots ruled over a realm made up of several different countries. As royal authority became increasingly institutional, a new idea emerged: the kingdom of Scotland as a single country and people.

EUROPEAN DEVELOPMENTS

Europe in the twelfth century was undergoing what has been called the 'Europeanisation of Europe'. Societies were becoming more alike, and yet at the same time more self-consciously distinct as independent kingdoms of equal status.

New monasteries were part of this process of Europeanisation, inspired by a shared desire across Europe to create a more Christian society. Some formed networks, none more so than Cistercian monasteries which spread throughout Europe. At the same time, monasteries identified with their local patrons (kings, queens, lords and ladies) who supplied them with property and privileges in exchange for regular prayers.

The map shows the sequence of Cistercian foundations from Cîteaux to Melrose, founded by King David I in 1136.

Donner de karrie latin in ono. Fourt den plantes de de cit osonach de aselves in annual tenevere in lo neure de karrie latin in ono. Fourt de dechoc quel preven de Audineture lieur in cop carrie on netur. Eso calden ivez es avers plantes es onaches ommino relatant i peruit detas clamani p adragina osarris ell'ingoz quas le osonachi limini que la l'inagna necellitate mea late p cir mea i libratem ponenda in paranevir. Dine q Eso q beredes mei q'intellores mei l'inc deva tramación planti timi osarrarii , ome boies plant, inmacion i prenti marraradori. Come l'inc deva tramación planti timi osarrarii , ome boies plant, inmacion i prenti marraradori. Come l'inc deva tramación planti timi